

Bridie Edge

Bridie is an associate solicitor who specialises in defending cases of fraud and white-collar crime. She has also been involved in proceedings brought by regulatory bodies and carries out pre-charge investigations on behalf of corporates and individuals suspected of criminal and/or regulatory offences.

Bridie predominantly works in the Corporate Crime and Financial Crime department. She enjoys untangling complicated material and is quickly able to identify the critical issues in her cases. Her background in Mathematics is advantageous when cases require the forensic analysis of financial documents.

Bridie has a passion for client care and takes a pragmatic and considered approach to all cases she is instructed in.

Bridie is regularly instructed in complex Proceeds of Crime Act matters, including section 22 applications. She has also been instructed in many cases involving serious crime and vehemently believes that every type of case should be defended properly and tried fairly.

She is described by her peers as having abilities beyond her years of experience and is praised for her level-headed and logical approach to problems.

Bridie is a member of the professional groups, Women in Criminal Law and the Female Fraud Forum.
